If you spend all you make you will be a ware slave as located to the control of the control live, for it is not so much what we make as what we save that constimake as what we save that consti-tutes our anchor to the windward. A wise man once told me that tw

What shall I do, fully after the pennies, that they were willing to deny themselves the present pleasure for the sake of a bigger good later on, while the second couple would have shown that they were wasteful and self-indulgent, and had neither foresight nor courage enough to look out for the future.

A great many people despise thrift because they think it is synonymous I got dressed for the street and was about to order my electric car when Mollie stopped me and suggested that we walk. Thrift is really the mother of all generosity because it is only those who have been willing to deny themselves and save what they made who have anything to give. When we want help we do not appeal to the shiftless. wworn. ne'er-do-wells of our acquaintance, but to the canny men and women who great-have been careful with their money. Only the thrifty can be generou Only the thrifty can be free. The man and woman who have not a dollar saved up are slaves to those who pay them wages. They must do as they are bidden. The money that is wasted by the average American child would very nearly put it through college.

One of the things that this war is teaching us is how much we can do without. It has turned a searchlight on our garbage pails and showed us the food we were throwing away. It has made us think of us as a nation to be thrifty in-stead of wasteful, a great blessing have come to us out of the great evil.

Whas Gilbert K. Chesterton would do with Germany he puts thus in his paper, "The New Witness": "My point presupposes such a de-feat of the German power as would permit a destruction of what is called the German empire. And this applies not merely to an empire in the sense of an autocracy, but even more to an empire in the sense of a unity. I would make Germany what the German phrase would make Italy: a geographical expression. I would not hesitate to reduce it again to the chaos of towns and tribes, and to use the pow-er of the victors, for the present, to forbid its recombination. Then, indeed, I do think there would be a chance of southern influences slowly making Germany civilized."

FOR LONESOME GIRLS

Two Suggestions Made to Remedy Conditions Brought About by War Work in the Capital.

Wants Marriage Bureau. class apartment buildings to be de-voted solely to the use of young unmarried men and women. Bugh a building should be six or eight stories Editor, The Washington Herald: In answer to the editorial of The Herald.

"The Girls in the Trenches," asking for suggestions regarding the lone-some girl problem, I have one sugges-tion to make. As a government cierk with elevators; three or four stories or one-half the building devoted to the young women and the other half to young men.

The ground floor should have a "haberdashery" for both sexes; cafe where ice cream, etc., may be served; a flower store. The lee cream parlor and flower store could be run jointly. Then, in addition to the above, there should be on the first floor a combination ballroom and reception-room, with several small semi-private alcove rooms opening directly into the large reception-room.

These restrooms who was appointed in the government service at a very young age, 19 years, untrained in government service work, but well educated, and not understand-ing the coldness and duliness of the ing the coldness and duliness of the National Capital compared to the so-ciability and friendliness of the home State, I believe I can appreciate the feelings of the young girls coming to the Capital to work for Uncle Sam, but Uncle Sam knows, how to look out for his own interests. The young girl government clerk will soon find that it lakes education, provides the control of th akes education, merit and some po-tical "pull" to hold a position in the overnment, and advancement beyond living salary is often the work of many patient years. Is it fair during his time to deprive; a girl of the chance to meet people of good social standing? Washington is a city of ubs, a city to which those who have achieved wealth and fame in the States like to come and build homes. One has but to walk or ride down Massa-chusetts avenue. Connecticut avenue or Sixteenth street northwest and notice the palatial residences to realize this fact. But the rich who dwell therein, perhaps for two or three months in the year, are not on the same social footing with government workers, and have ways, means and leisure to solve social problems that the government clerk has not. They the government clerk has not. They nonths in the year, are not on the may go South in the winter or North in the summer, but, alas—the poor government clerk must answer always the call of duty. So to make a long story short, I am proposing a somewhat radical suggestion perhaps but one which if The Herald approved might, with its influence, make successful. It is this:

Introduce a bill in the House of Senate to establish a national marriage with nothing less. But whatever ate to establish a national marriage bureau, and have each applicant pay fee of $1 to enroll and give a statement of facts concerning himself or herself such as his or her health, tamily history, age, personal appear-ance, character, financial standing and type of wife or husband he or sh eeks, sworn to before a notary pubfeativals for the purpose of introduc-ing its young people, and it is right and proper that our young girls should have the freest, most open legitimate means to meet good men from all over the country with honest matrimonial intentions This is thrift week-the week set only had a little money, but I didn't This condition is harmful to both mer and women. Then, too, the suggestion I have made would work toward effi ciency in the government service and help to solve the retirement and of a most exacting character, that she has mean and unreasonable poli-

I have no fault to find that this function of the church was uncon-sciously added; but rather regret that fact that its influence and benefits have reached scarcely one-half the people. There are thousands of per-sons who do not belong to any church and have no easy means to come in contact with persons of the opposite sex, or a place where they may form friendships, which may later ripen into love under influences ax tions which are, in all respects, high class and free from the da countered in "dance-halls," rinks," and the like.
